

COED WINS A POINT AGAINST MARYLAND U.

Final Argument to Be Heard in Miss Simpson's Plea for Reinstatement.

Final arguments on the petition for a writ of mandamus filed by Miss Vivian Simpson to compel Albert F. Woods, president of the University of Maryland, to reinstate her at the university, will be heard before Judge Heusler in Baltimore city court tomorrow morning.

Friends of Miss Simpson are optimistic as to the outcome of the trial. The petition was filed when Woods refused to allow Miss Simpson to register for the present school term at the university.

From evidence introduced it appeared that the girl was denied admission due to her refusal to furnish President Woods with certain information regarding the filing of affidavits charging members of the faculty with improper behavior. She also contends that she was not given a hearing and consequently the university head was without right in refusing her entrance.

Judge Heusler, at the second day of the hearing, held that the girl was right in her refusal to give the desired information, ruling out certain evidence offered by the defense which tended to show that she knew the source of the information desired by Woods.
